Making plans

Are you doing anything (this evening)?

Have you got anything on (this Saturday)?

What are you up to (on Sunday)?

I thought we could give (that new gym/spa/climbing wall) a try.

I thought we could go and see (that new film / exhibition).

I thought we could check out (that new film / play / exhibition / spa).

I wouldn't mind (doing / seeing that). How about you?

Do you feel like (coming along, too)?

Do you fancy (doing / trying / going to something a bit different)?

I'm sorry, but I don't feel up to (sitting through a long film / going for a run / walking around an art gallery for an hour).

It's not really my thing.

Maybe some other time.

I'd rather give that a miss, if you don't mind.

I'm easy. Whatever you like.

I really don't mind. It's up to you.

I'm not bothered either way.

It's all the same to me.

Speaker 1

You would prefer to see a good Spanish thriller with plenty of action and mystery. You like comedy, but nothing romantic. You work until 6pm during the week, but only in the mornings at the weekend.

Speaker 2

There haven't been any decent Spanish films in the cinema for ages, so you've got used to seeing films from other countries. You love mystery, music, romance and fantasy, but you also like films that make you laugh. You are not working at the moment, so you would like to go to the cinema on a weekday when the sessions are cheaper.
