TRIPS IN TOKYO

FACTORY TOURISM

Are you looking for something new to do? How about a sightseeing tour of the factories in the Kawasaki industrial zone? You don't actually go inside the factories or discover how they work. But you can take great pictures. The factory lights look amazing in the dark, so the best time to do this is at night. That's why this unusual form of tourism is called kojo yakei, or factory night view. So, how can you go on a kojo yakei trip? Here are some options:

BY BOAT

One popular way to tour the industrial zone is by yakatabune – a long, traditional Japanese boat. On the way, you can sit inside the boat and have a romantic meal while you sail past the magnificent Yokohama Bay Bridge to the factories.

BY BUS

A bus tour is about 3 hours and 15 minutes long and it takes you to some of the best places for seeing the factories. Some of these aren't open to the public, so it's a chance to take some very special photos!

BY TRAIN

Do you hate sightseeing in groups? You can take the Tsurumi train line to explore the western part of the Kawasaki industrial zone. It's definitely an adventure, but it's not always easy to do. The trains don't come very often, and some stations are for factory workers only.
