MEALS IN BRITAIN

British people usually have a small meal for lunch because they eat away from home. They often take their lunch to school or the office. They usually have a sandwich and some fruit. But they also like fish and chips.

In the late afternoon, they have their dinner. They usually have meat and vegetables or even pasta. They often have sweets or cakes as a dessert, because fruit is expensive.

In the morning, breakfast is an important meal. They have sausages, eggs, toast and tomato. Sometimes they have cornflakes too.
